

Casa Colonial

Casa Colonial

1322 N. Peak St., 214.941.8700

Keys to the Door: Owners Sara Vazquez and Rita Vazquez-Baños.

Havana Homestead: If you're just dying for a few Cuban-style rafia placemats and candles that smell of Havana nights, travel to charming Casa Colonial in East Dallas, recently opened by enterprising, Cuban-born sisters Sara Vazquez and Rita Vazquez-Baños. The stylish girls started their biz in 1997 as

Havana 1515 (sold to the trade only), and this is their first retail store. The airy little shop carries the sisters' lines of tropical bedding, placemats, table runners and plump pillows, decorative shells and Canne à Sucre candles that smell of sugarcane. The chic boutique is a one-stop shop for turning even your in-town hacienda into a mini-paradise. Regan Cumming

Charles armchair by Blanc d'Ivoire

Tesori Designs at ID Collection

Into the Woods

ID Collection has a new name we've fallen for: Tesori Designs — think exuberant buffets, coffee tables, dining tables and chairs with fine-grained veneers, hand-rubbed finishes and custom options. To the trade at ID Collection; interiordesigncollection.com. Brooke Hortenstine

J'Adore Blanc d'Ivoire!

July is the perfect month to jet off to the south of France for a getaway. But if you're not up for the 10-hour flight — even if it's chartered — stock your Dallas petite château with the Provence-inspired pieces by Blanc d'Ivoire, a jewel of a company chartered by former French fashion designer Monic Fischer, just down le grande boulevard in Haltom City. We love her Charles armchair, in velvety suede or creamy natural linen, for its elegant curves and stunningly soft palette, as well as Blanc d'Ivoire's lighting, linens, dinnerware and glassware. At The Nest, Room Service Home. Bonnie Thompson

The chicest vase for fall

Black springbok fur vase designed by Gilles Caffier $605, at Grange Hall.

